Aims and Scope:

The field of Culture and Psychology is one of the fastest growing areas within the social sciences. Just in the last 10 years, the field has grown exponentially, as evidenced in numerous Annual Review of Psychology chapters, books, and journal articles. The field of Culture and Psychology cuts across all areas of Psychology. There are exciting developments in diverse areas such as culture and neuroscience, culture and cognition, culture and human development, culture and language, culture and psychopathology, culture and social behavior, culture and organizational behavior, culture and marketing, among other topics. As a repeating annual series, the Advances in Culture and Psychology will be the first annual volume to have state of the art reviews of scholars’ research programs in the growing field of Culture and Psychology.

Our key goals for the Advances in Culture and Psychology Series are to:
- Develop an intellectual home for culture and psychology research programs
- Foster bridges and connections among cultural scholars from across the discipline
- Create a highly cited volume and a premier outlet for culture and psychology research
- Publish articles that reflect the theoretical, methodological, and epistemological diversity in the study of culture and psychology
- Enhance the collective identity of the culture and psychology field
Relationships to Other Publications:

There are numerous empirical outlets for cross-cultural research, yet currently there is no repeating annual series that provides an outlet for scholars’ own programmatic research across the field of Culture and Psychology. This will be the first series of its kind to have reviews within the diverse field of Culture and Psychology within the same intellectual home.

Targeted Articles:

Scholars from across the discipline will be invited to contribute articles on a yearly basis so that the volume reflects diverse contributions across the field of Culture and Psychology. Authors are also encouraged to submit their work to be considered for publication. Targeted articles for the Advances in Culture and Psychology are mature research programs of scholars’ own programmatic work that highlights the cumulative knowledge that has been gained through a particular research program (similar to the high profile Advances in Experimental Social Psychology series). We will also consider manuscripts which describe up and coming research programs that have already shown promise on cutting-edge topics as well as manuscripts that describe new data from large scale empirical research projects. We envision the Advances in Culture and Psychology to also showcase work from other disciplines, including Anthropology, Communication, Economics, Sociology, among other disciplines given that culture work is inherently interdisciplinary.
